

My research examined the ways youth entrepreneurial events are beneficial to small towns. Additionally, I examined strategies involving youth entrepreneurs' ability to incorporate basic economic concepts. Working with Marietta Main Street, I explored the connection between youth-focused events and community-engagement. I further explored the preparation processes for young business owners. This quantitative study found a relationship between youth-based events and civic participation.