

This presentation will highlight two sessions attended at the American Music Therapy Association Conference in 2019. The first will address the issue of access to music therapy in rural areas and how to combat the barriers that come with it. The second will discuss how music therapy is utilized for clients with ADHD as well as how the brain with ADHD functions with music as a tool for coping and treating.