

Group conformity occurs when an individual changes or keeps their beliefs to align with a groups' beliefs. We will look at conformity in relation to the number of confederates present (none, one, or three). A between subjects one-way ANOVA will be used to analyze the data. We hypothesize that with more confederates present, there will be a higher rate of agreement with the confederates for the participants within the room.