

For many years, children have been struggling with behavior in school, the past decade schools have been implementing behavioral health programs in schools. How has these programs benefited the children starting from kindergarten and moving up into elementary. Meeting with the children throughout the day helps get them back on track. Trying new ways to talk to them will help in finding out if there is a big increase in their behavior after meeting.