

The roundtable discussion will present multiple perspectives on the destructiveness of the American Civil War by students in the Professional Historian class. Students evaluated both primary and secondary sources in order to illustrate the ways in which the historical scholarship on this topic has differed, and the factors that might account for these differences. The current state of the field will be summarized and suggestions for avenues of research in the future will be presented.