

This project is about the diagenesis of the Greenbriar Formation. It is located in the Burning Springs Limestone Quarry. The project is to study diagenetic processes and understand their relation to the faults located in the area. This will give an idea of fluid flow in the are and help determine the role that the fault played in changing the underground environment.