

This study examines the role of investment income in the life insurance industry and the risks it presents. The study examines the financial statements of public life insurance providers listed on the NYSE and the relationship between their premium revenue and the revenue they derive from net investment income and equity investment income.