

This study examined ways that Behavioral Health Services affects the hierarchy of needs for students enrolled in the program. During this quantified study I examined ways that participation in theoretic strategies such as group and play supports a healthy progression of youth. The findings from this research can encourage other schools in Ohio to adapt similar program as a way to support the child as a whole.