

A Cepheid Variable is a type of star that pulsates radially, varying in both diameter and temperature, producing changes in brightness with a well-defined period and amplitude. Our objective is to detect these variations using the 14-inch telescope on the roof of Mills Hall. I will present results from our observations of Cepheid Variable stars, along with comparisons to published data. Our method for observing stars and determining brightness will also be described.