

Finding a solution for aggressive behavior in dogs is important for their overall well-being and their owners. I hypothesized that diets with low protein levels plus tryptophan supplementation, high protein levels plus tyrosine supplementation, or low protein content alone decreases aggressive tendencies in dogs. I concluded that diets of low protein levels plus tryptophan supplementation and low protein content alone supports my hypothesis, but high protein plus tyrosine supplementation does not support my hypothesis.