

Herbal treatments have become an alternative therapy to chronic skin conditions. This literature research determined if the popular plants witch hazel, tea, and rose are more effective in treating immune dysfunction that cause psoriasis, eczema, and atopic dermatitis, rather than just relieving the symptoms. Results indicate that extracts are effective in inhibiting detrimental enzymes that lead to skin challenges thereby treating conditions at the source.